“QICM has given us the confidence that we are undertaking our duties with the best interest of all our stakeholders, staff, customers, colleagues and directors ...”

Linda Willows, Head of Legal and Business Management at Brother UK

TWO firms have been re-accredited with the Quality in Credit Management (QICM) standard – Aimia Foods, a privately owned food and beverages manufacturer, and Brother UK, part of the worldwide electronics and manufacturing business.

Sharon Adams, Credit Manager at Aimia Foods says that achieving QICM reaccreditation has been an important means of reaffirming that the department has not only maintained its levels of quality and compliance, but also further improved them: “After we originally gained QICM accreditation, it made me want to raise our game even further and ensure that we were the very best we could be,” she said.

Linda Willows, Head of Legal and Business Management at Brother UK, believes that QICM is the premier accreditation for credit management and it was important to maintain the high standards set from the initial assessment: “QICM has given us the confidence that we are undertaking our duties with the best interest of all stakeholders, staff, customers, colleagues and directors and following a second positive assessment, our good results have been reaffirmed.”

Aimia Foods and Brother UK were assessed for re-accreditation by Brian Morgan and Chris Sanders respectively.
